Halper auctioned off his collection in 1999, receiving $7.5 million from the Baseball Hall of Fame and $30 million from Sotheby's. The Baseball Hall of Fame got first pick, selecting such items as a Shoeless Joe Jackson jersey and Ty Cobb's diary. In September 1999, these pieces were showcased as the "Barry Halper Gallery" within the Hall of Fame itself.

The first step in my investigation was to review the Sotheby's catalog for the 1999 sale of the Barry Halper Collection, which had netted something over $20,000,000.<sup>4</sup> This unindexed, three-volume set, which provides descriptions, some photos, and the realized prices of the auctioned items, is practically a baseball history in itself and would be an interesting read for any SABR member. My first perusal, however, yielded no information on the Cobb shotgun.
