Emergency Doctor

Rather, emergency medicine (EM) physicians are masters of resuscitating the dying, the dead — stabilizing the sick. Take, for instance, my 50-year-old patient who suddenly dropped dead at home. He had suffered a heart attack severe enough to stop his heart. His first stop was through the ER, where I could get his heart beating again.

What exactly does an emergency physician do?

It is primarily hospital emergency department based, but with extensive pre-hospital responsibilities for emergency medical systems. The emergency doctor provides immediate initial recognition, evaluation, care and disposition of patients in response to acute illness and injury.
