Captain Patrick Logan was the commandant of the Moreton Bay Penal Settlement from 1826 until his death in 1830 at the hands of Aboriginal Australians who objected to him entering their lands. As he had been hated by convicts, there were rumours that escaped convicts living in the bush had attacked him, but there is no evidence of this. Born in East Renton, Berwickshire, Scotland, he was the youngest son of a Scottish landowner and farmer, Abraham Logan and Janet Johnstoun. He was baptised at Col

In Patrick's neighbourhood, garbage is collected from the back lane. Patrick's house had a back fence at the edge of the laneway. There was an indentation in the fence with a stand for garbage cans. The way the fence was built, the stand was technically on the inside of the fence, so the garbage cans were on Patrick's property.
