That's Not How We Do It in Our Family. Over the years our children have come home and said things like, "You know, Eric's family watches TV during dinner.". To which we would respond. "That's nice, but that's not how we do it in our family.". Our response served two purposes; one was to plant our flag with a solid "no," and the other was to indicate that we make the "choice" to do what we do (as if we considered watching TV during dinner and decided it wasn't for us).
